2014: THE BATTLE FOR CONTROL

THE SENATE

A top storyline of this election season: Can Republicans gain a net of six Senate seats to win back control of the chamber?

The last time the GOP had a majority was during the 109th Congress from 2005-2006. Currently, Democrats have a 55-45 advantage in the Senate, with the chamber's two independents (Angus King of Maine and Bernie Sanders of Vermont) caucusing with the party.

There are 36 Senate seats to be decided in November 2014, including both seats in Oklahoma and South Carolina.

As of this writing, Republicans have a better-than-50-50% chance of winning the majority. One reason is the playing ground. Republicans can capture control by winning six of seven Democratic-held seats in states that President Obama lost in 2012: Alaska, Arkansas, Louisiana, Montana, North Carolina, South Dakota, and West Virginia.

A second reason is that Republicans have expanded the map. Even if they lose in some of the red states, the GOP has put credible candidates in blue and purple states like Colorado, Iowa, even New Hampshire.

FIRST READ FAST FACT

If there's a 50-50 tie, the tiebreaker goes to Vice President Joe Biden, which would give Democrats the majority.

Still, Democrats could hang on to their majority. Many of their incumbents (like Mark Begich in Alaska and Kay Hagan in North Carolina) have run good races. And while President Obama's numbers are worse than they were in 2010, so are the Republican Party's numbers. A final late development: Democrats potentially have put two contests in play in traditional red states -- Kansas and South Dakota.

OVERTIME?

It's likely we won't know which party controls the Senate – even a month after Election Day. If no one gets more than 50% of the vote in Louisiana's Nov. 4 "jungle primary," then the state holds a runoff on Dec. 6. The same is true in Georgia: If no one gets more than 50%, the contest heads to a Jan. 6 runoff. (The last time this Georgia seat was up, in 2008, it did in fact go to a runoff election.)

OVERTIME, PART TWO?

If independent Greg Orman wins Kansas' Senate contest, it's also possible that the political world won't know which party controls the Senate until Orman announces the party with which he'll caucus.

2014: THE BATTLE FOR CONTROL

A top storyline of this election season: Democrats need to gain a net 17 House seats to take back control. That's not looking likely.

THE HOUSE

With Republicans enjoying a 233-199 advantage (two vacancies are Democrats and one is Republican), Democrats need to gain a net 17 House seats to take back the chamber. And the chances of that happening are significantly LESS likely than Republicans winning control of the Senate. The big reason why: Thanks to the GOP's redistricting gains after 2010, Democrats picked up only eight House seats in the 2012 election – and that was with President Obama winning the national vote by four percentage points. But this isn't 2012. President Obama's approval ratings are in the low 40s, and the Democratic base (younger voters, minorities) aren't your traditional midterm voters.

THE GOVS

There are 36 gubernatorial races this November, with control of governor's mansions at stake.

Currently, Republicans hold 29 governorships, while Democrats hold 21.

FIRST READ FAST FACT

The last time five or more incumbent governors lost re-election was in 1994, when five went down to defeat.

One story that shouldn't be overlooked is that 2014 might be the year when many incumbent governors could go down to defeat. One has already lost (Hawaii Gov. Neil Abercrombie), and several other governors are vulnerable this cycle (Alaska's Sean Parnell, Florida's Rick Scott, Pennsylvania's Tom Corbett, Maine's Paul LePage, Colorado's John Hickenlooper, Wisconsin's Scott Walker, Connecticut's Dan Malloy, Illinois' Pat Quinn, Kansas' Sam Brownback and Michigan's Rick Snyder.)

MIDTERM ELECTIONS: A HISTORICAL LOOK

There is another reason Republicans are poised for gains: The party controlling the White House USUALLY loses seats.

Midterms for the Party Controlling the White House since World War II
YEAR	HOUSE Gain/Losses	SENATE Gain/Losses
1946 Truman	-55	-12
1950 Truman	-28	-5
1954 Ike	-18	-1
1958 Ike	-48	-12
1962 Kennedy	-4	2
1966 LBJ	-48	-4
1970 Nixon	-12	1
1974 Ford	-48	-4
1978 Carter	-15	-3
1982 Reagan	-26	1
1986 Reagan	-5	-8
1990 Bush	-8	-1
1994 Clinton	-54	-8
1998 Clinton	5	0
2002 Bush	8	1
2006 Bush	-30	-6
2010 Obama	-63	-6
AVG	-26.4	-3.8

Only twice since 1946 has the incumbent party actually GAINED House seats. And the Senate losses are even bigger in a president's second midterm election – often referred to as the “Six-Year Itch.”

“THE SIX YEAR ITCH”

“Six-Year Itches” for the Party Controlling the White House since World War II

YEAR	HOUSE Gain/Losses	SENATE Gain/Losses
1950 Truman	-28	-5
1958 Ike	-48	-12
1974 Ford	-48	-4
1986 Reagan	-5	-8
1998 Clinton	5	0
2006 Bush	-30	-6
AVG	-25.6	-5.8

NOTE: Since Nixon resigned from office just months before the 1974 midterm elections – and the GOP's losses were due primarily to the Watergate scandal – this chart counts that midterm season as a “Six-Year Itch” election.

WHAT CHANGES (AND WHAT DOESN'T)IF REPUBLICANS CONTROL THE SENATE?

With Republicans having at least a 50%-50% shot at winning control of the U.S. Senate, it's important to note what a GOP-led Senate would change in Washington:

- ☑ It would increase the number of vetoes President Obama has issued so far (just two) during his time in the White House. With Republicans controlling both the House and Senate, you can expect many more bills reaching his desk that he will oppose. Remember: It takes a two-thirds vote in each chamber for Congress to override a veto (so about 290 in the House and 67 in the Senate).
- ☑ It would hinder Obama's ability to make appointments to the executive branch and to the judiciary, even to the U.S. Supreme Court if there's a vacancy. If Republicans have 51 votes at their disposal, then slam-dunks for confirmation become A LOT harder.
- ☑ It would raise the profiles of the Republican and Democratic centrists -- like Susan Collins, Lisa Murkowski, Joe Manchin, Angus King, Heidi Heitkamp. If legislation will need 60 votes to even reach Obama's desk, then those centrists will become kingmakers.

FIRST READ FAST FACT

*Bills vetoed by Obama (to date): 2
Bills vetoed by Bush (total): 12
Bills vetoed by Clinton (total) : 37*

FIRST READ (BONUS) FAST FACT

*The president who issued the most vetoes?
Franklin Delano Roosevelt (635 bills)*

WHAT PROBABLY WON'T CHANGE?

With the 113th Congress on track to reach a historic low in the number of bills becoming law, the GOP controlling the Senate won't really change that. What will change is that legislation will likely die via presidential veto rather than due to inactivity in the House or Senate.

As of October 15, the 113th Congress had passed just 184 bills into law – fewer than the 195 the 112th Congress passed in the same time period.

CONGRESS'S PRODUCTIVITY.

THE SPRINGBOARD TO 2016

The midterms also traditionally serve as a springboard for the next presidential election. In other words, the 2016 presidential election will start to get underway the day after Nov. 4, 2014.

Here are a few midterm-related items to keep in mind about 2016:

- ☑ The party that wins big in the midterms often – but not always – has the momentum heading into the presidential election. Think 1960 (after the Dems' success in the '58 midterms), 1976 (after Watergate in 1974), and 2008. But there are exceptions: For example, Reagan and Republicans lost big in the '86 midterms, but the GOP won the presidential election two years later.

- ☑ A potential GOP presidential candidate, Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker is on the ballot in a VERY close race for re-election. If he wins, he'll have a great talking point (winning this battleground state three times in the past four years). But if he loses, there goes any '16 bid.

- ☑ Maybe the best 2016-related state to watch on Election Night is battleground Colorado.

The GOP winning the Senate and/or gubernatorial contests would snap what has essentially been a 10-year losing streak in the state, which could give Republicans a boost about their chances of Colorado's nine electoral votes in 2016. But losing there – in this climate and with its top challengers – would signal that Republicans are a long way from winning back Colorado.

MIDTERMS 2014: A VIEWER'S GUIDE

The nation's top races to watch, listed by poll closing time

FINAL POLLS CLOSE at 7:00 PM ET

(GEORGIA, INDIANA, KENTUCKY, SOUTH CAROLINA, VERMONT, VIRGINIA)

GEORGIA

- ☑ SENATE: Newcomers David Perdue (R) and Michelle Nunn (D) – the former manager of the George H.W. Bush-founded Points of Light Foundation -- may not have previous political experience, but both hope to leverage deep family ties in the state. (Perdue is the cousin of former governor Sonny Perdue, while Nunn is the daughter of longtime Sen. Sam Nunn.)
- ☑ GOVERNOR: Democrat Jason Carter, the grandson of former President Jimmy Carter, has given the party a shot at unseating incumbent Republican Nathan Deal, who's struggled with ethics issues.
- ☑ HOUSE, GA-12: The last white Democratic congressman in the Deep South, John Barrow is a perennial but resilient target for Republicans, who think they might finally have the right candidate this year in construction company owner Rick Allen.

INDIANA

- ☑ HOUSE, IN-2: Republican Jackie Walorski is a top target on Democrats' list after a close win in 2012. She's up against Democrat Joe Bock, an expert in humanitarian aid and disaster response.

KENTUCKY

- ☑ SENATE: In one of the most high-profile races in the country, Democrat Alison Lundergan Grimes is trying to unseat powerful Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell. While McConnell doesn't exactly enjoy sky-high approval in the state, Grimes must distance herself from a president who's widely unpopular there.

SOUTH CAROLINA

- ☑ GOVERNOR : South Carolina Gov. Nikki Haley faces a rematch against Democrat Vincent Sheheen, who lost the 2010 contest to her by a little less than five percentage points.

VERMONT No major races to watch.

VIRGINIA

- ☑ SENATE: Incumbent Democrat Mark Warner, a former governor, remains popular in the state, but he's getting a challenge from Republican Ed Gillespie, a lobbyist and former RNC chair.
- ☑ HOUSE, VA-10: Republicans feel they're well positioned to hand retiring Rep. Frank Wolf's seat off to one of his former aides, state Delegate Barbara Comstock, a former RNC oppo researcher and Oversight panel lawyer known for digging up dirt on the Clinton family and Al Gore. She faces Fairfax County Supervisor John Foust.

(NORTH CAROLINA, OHIO, WEST VIRGINIA)

NORTH CAROLINA

- ☑ SENATE: Freshman Sen. Kay Hagan is counting on big turnout from minorities and women to buoy her above Republican House Speaker Thom Tillis.
- ☑ HOUSE, NC-2: American Idol runner-up Clay Aiken has gotten plenty of media attention for his turn from entertainment to politics as he tries to unseat Rep. Renee Ellmers, but he's a longshot in this heavily Republican district.

OHIO No major races to watch.

WEST VIRGINIA

- ☑ SENATE: West Virginia is one state where Democrats are all but certain to lose a Senate seat with the retirement of Jay Rockefeller. In a coal-heavy state with little warmth for President Barack Obama, Secretary of State Natalie Tennant is little match for Republican Rep. Shelley Moore Capito, who's expected to win soundly.

FIRST READ FAST FACT

There are 310 female candidates who ran for governor, House, and Senate, including in primaries. That's fewer than last cycle, when there were 339 female candidates for the same offices.

CONNECTICUT

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Incumbent Democrat Dan Malloy isn't terribly popular in the state, and he's facing a tough challenge from his 2010 GOP foe (and onetime U.S. ambassador to Ireland) Tom Foley.

DELAWARE No major races to watch.

FLORIDA

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Republican Gov. Rick Scott barely won in 2010, and he's suffered from poor approval ratings during his tenure. His opponent is Republican-turned-independent-turned-Democrat Charlie Crist, who's got plenty of charisma but may have trouble shaking the perception of political opportunism.
- ☑ HOUSE, FL-2: Tea Party Rep. Steve Southerland was swept into office in the 2010 wave. Despite the district's GOP lean, he's got a formidable challenger this cycle from Democrat Gwen Graham, the daughter of beloved former Sen. and Gov. Bob Graham.
- ☑ HOUSE, FL-18: Democratic incumbent Patrick Murphy, who defeated polarizing Republican Allen West two years ago by fewer than 2,000 votes, is running against Republican Carl Domino.
- ☑ HOUSE, FL-26: Incumbent Democrat Joe Garcia and Republican Carlos Curbelo are both fighting accusations of ethical impropriety in this heavily Latino Miami-area district.

ILLINOIS

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Gov. Pat Quinn is one of the most unpopular politicians in the country, so he's one of the most vulnerable – even in this reliably blue state. Businessman Bruce Rauner is making this a real race, although Democrats are painting him as a Romney-esque rich guy who can't relate to everyday voters.
- ☑ HOUSE, IL-10: GOP Rep. Robert Dold is making a comeback bid against the man who ousted him from his suburban Chicago seat in 2012, Democrat Brad Schneider.
- ☑ HOUSE, IL-12: In 2012, Bill Enyart proved to be a stronger-than-expected Democratic candidate. Now, he's facing 10-term state House member Mike Bost (whose name might be familiar from his viral paper-throwing rant at the Illinois General Assembly in 2012).

MAINE

- ☑ Governor: GOP Maine Gov. Paul LePage has made plenty of headlines for his not-so politically correct statements since being elected in a three-way race in 2010. He could win again -- mostly because the anti-LePage vote could once again be split between an independent, Eliot Cutler, and a Democrat, Rep. Mike Michaud.

MARYLAND

- ☑ Governor: Republican businessman Larry Hogan has surprised political observers by remaining fairly competitive in this race against Democrat Anthony Brown. But Brown is still favored to win in this heavily Democratic state.

MASSACHUSETTS

- ☑ Governor: Remember Martha Coakley? The Democratic attorney general who couldn't beat Scott Brown is in a close race for governor in heavily blue Massachusetts. Her GOP opponent is former health care CEO Charlie Baker.
- ☑ House, MA-6: Incumbent Democrat John Tierney got beat in the state's late primary by Iraq veteran Seth Moulton. Moulton will face previous candidate and former state senator Richard Tisei, one of the few openly gay Republicans running this cycle.

(ALABAMA, CONNECTICUT, DELAWARE, FLORIDA, ILLINOIS, MAINE, MARYLAND, MASSACHUSETTS, MISSISSIPPI, MISSOURI, NEW HAMPSHIRE, NEW JERSEY, OKLAHOMA, PENNSYLVANIA, RHODE ISLAND, TENNESSEE, WASHINGTON DC)

MISSISSIPPI

- ☑ Senate: Thad Cochran barely survived a drawn-out primary challenge by state Sen. Chris McDaniel, who still argues that Cochran's courtship of African-American voters constituted voter fraud. But despite Cochran's near-loss, Democratic rival and former congressman Travis Childers faces an uphill battle in this heavily Republican state

MISSOURI No major races to watch.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

- ☑ GOVERNOR: In this politically unpredictable state, incumbent Democratic Gov. Maggie Hassan has been polling ahead of GOP nominee Walt Havenstein, who's new to politics and relatively unknown.
- ☑ SENATE: Former Massachusetts Sen. Scott Brown is now the Republican nominee for Senate in neighboring New Hampshire. He'll have to fight accusations of carpetbagging in his effort to bring down incumbent Democrat Jeanne Shaheen.
- ☑ HOUSE, NH-1: Democrat Carol Shea-Porter and Republican Frank Guinta have been battling each other for this seat for going on 10 years. Shea-Porter won it in 2006 against Jeb Bradley, lost it in 2010 to Guinta and won it back in 2012. But without the president on the ballot, Guinta may have the advantage this cycle.
- ☑ HOUSE, NH-2: GOP state Rep. Marilinda Garcia is everything Republicans could want in a rising star—she's young, telegenic and Hispanic. She's also an unapologetic conservative (she suggested that the president has "many, many impeachable offenses") who may just be too far to the right in a district that's supported Obama by double digits twice. She's facing incumbent Democrat Rep. Ann McLane Kuster.

NEW JERSEY

- ☑ House, NJ-3: Tom MacArthur, an insurance company CEO and former mayor of Randolph, recently moved to the Burlington area district from northern New Jersey. But with deep pockets, he's considered to be a favorite over Democratic challenger Aimee Belgard.

OKLAHOMA No major races to watch.

PENNSYLVANIA

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Plagued by poor approval ratings, Republican Tom Corbett is in deep trouble. Businessman Tom Wolf, who beat early frontrunner Allyson Schwartz in the Democratic primary, seems poised to oust him after just one term.

RHODE ISLAND

- ☑ GOVERNOR: If she can hold off Republican Allan Fung, Democratic State Treasurer Gina Raimondo will be Rhode Island's first female governor.

TENNESSEE

- ☑ SENATE: Lamar Alexander survived a primary challenge from state Rep. Joe Carr and is well positioned in this heavily Republican state. The Democrat in the race, Gordon Ball, is an attorney who's put a LOT of his own money into his effort.

ARKANSAS

- ☑ GOVERNOR: The race to replace term-limited Gov. Mike Beebe is a competitive matchup between two ex-congressmen: Democrat Mike Ross and Republican Asa Hutchinson. Democrats in both the Senate and gubernatorial races will have to contend with Obama's dismal approval rating in the low 30s.
- ☑ SENATE: The contest between Republican Rep. Tom Cotton and Democratic Sen. Mark Pryor is one of the most closely watched in the country. Pryor has deep roots in the state, while Cotton has a military background and anti-Obama momentum on his side.
- ☑ HOUSE, AR-2: Democrats are bullish about candidate Patrick Henry Hays, the former six-term mayor of North Little Rock, in this Republican-leaning district. He's facing banker French Hill in the open seat race to replace Republican Tim Griffin.
- ☑ HOUSE, AR-4: Clinton-era FEMA director James Lee Witt hopes he can overcome the district's deepening red hue in this race against Republican state House Majority Leader Bruce Westerman. They're vying to replace Tom Cotton, who's running for Senate.

ARIZONA

- ☑ GOVERNOR: The candidates vying to replace term-limited GOP Gov. Jan Brewer are Democrat Fred DuVal, a former Clinton staffer and Board of Regents head, and Republican State Treasurer Doug Ducey, who helped found Cold Stone Creamery.
- ☑ HOUSE: AZ-1: Democrat Ann Kirkpatrick is fighting to keep a seat she lost in 2010 but won back in 2012. Her opponent is Republican House Speaker Andy Tobin.
- ☑ HOUSE: AZ-2: Martha McSally, the first female fighter pilot to fly in combat, came within a point of beating Democrat Ron Barber two years ago. Barber's getting a boost in ads from his old boss and predecessor, gun violence victim Gabrielle Giffords.
- ☑ HOUSE, AZ-9: Freshman Democrat Kyrsten Sinema won with less than 50 percent of the vote in 2012, but has worked hard to reach out to business groups and portray herself as a centrist since foes tried to brand her as a radical liberal last cycle. Her opponent, retired Air Force pilot Wendy Rogers, is well behind Sinema in fundraising.

COLORADO

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Incumbent John Hickenlooper is getting a formidable challenge from former congressman Bob Beauprez, who (to the relief of Republicans) beat anti-immigration candidate Tom Tancredo in the GOP primary. Hickenlooper has struggled with perceived indecision on the issues of gun control and capital punishment.
- ☑ SENATE: In another of the nation's marquee Senate races, incumbent Democrat Mark Udall faces Republican Rep. Cory Gardner. Women's issues – particularly contraception -- and immigration have played big in this race as Democrats try to boost turnout in this purple-trending state.
- ☑ HOUSE, CO-6: The battle between Republican incumbent Mike Coffman and former Colorado House Speaker Andrew Romanoff is slated to be one of the tightest and most expensive House races in the country.

KANSAS

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Republicans are generally fans of spending cuts, but the ones made by Gov. Sam Brownback were so deep that he now faces a financial crisis – and substantial backlash from his own party. Democrat Paul Davis, the state House minority leader, isn't well known in the state, but he's getting serious traction because of Brownback's unpopularity.
- ☑ SENATE: With Democratic Senate candidate Chad Taylor deciding to drop his bid late in the race, it's a brawl between incumbent Sen. Pat Roberts – who faces questions about his residency – and independent Greg Orman. This wasn't supposed to be a race at all; now, it could be a barnburner.

LOUISIANA

- ☑ SENATE: Democratic incumbent Mary Landrieu is one of the most vulnerable senators in the country. She's hoping to hold off a challenge from Republican Rep. Bill Cassidy. But there's a twist: Louisiana law requires that one candidate get to 50 percent of the vote to avoid a runoff. That doesn't look likely, so this one may be going into overtime – until a runoff election Dec. 6.

MICHIGAN

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Onetime Gateway Computers president Rick Snyder ran four years ago as “one tough nerd,” winning by nearly 20 points in the fairly Democratic-leaning state. Now, he's battling unions in the state displeased with his Republican policies. This could be a down-to-the-wire race between Snyder and Democratic nominee Mark Schauer, a former congressman.
- ☑ SENATE: Democrat Rep. Gary Peters appears to have opened up a lead over Republican candidate Terri Lynn Land, Michigan's former secretary of state. The winner replaces retiring Sen. Carl Levin.

MINNESOTA

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Mark Dayton barely won his seat four years ago. But in this blue state, he's doing well in his re-election bid against the Republican in the race, Hennepin County Commissioner Jeff Johnson.
- ☑ SENATE: Speaking of past close races... Six years ago, Al Franken's race against Norm Coleman was so close that it was contested for months in an intense legal battle. Now, the Democrat doesn't appear to be facing another nailbiter; he's comfortably leading Republican Senate nominee Mike McFadden in public polls.
- ☑ HOUSE, MN-2: GOP Rep. John Kline is seeking a seventh term in this recently redistricted seat. Democratic challenger Mike Obermuller came within eight points of ousting him in 2012. HBO comedian Bill Maher has Kline in his sights in a segment called "Flip a District."
- ☑ HOUSE, MN-8: Democrat Rick Nolan took a three-decade break from Congress before returning to the Hill last cycle. But he's been out-raised by Republican rival and wealthy businessman Stewart Mills. Mills is sure to get some media attention for more than just his quarterly FEC filings; with long blond hair and good looks, he's been dubbed the "Brad Pitt of the Republican Party."

NEBRASKA

- ☑ HOUSE, NE-2: Republican Lee Terry faces a challenge from Democratic state Sen. Brad Ashford in this Omaha-area district.

NEW MEXICO

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Susana Martinez, sometimes mentioned as a potential GOP candidate for national office, is leading Democratic challenger and attorney general Gary King – the son of a three-term governor of the state.

NEW YORK

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Liberal Democrats haven't been too enamored of Gov. Andrew Cuomo for what they call his failures to advance some progressive agenda items (as well as an ongoing fracas over an anti-corruption commission). About a third of Democrats registered that discontent by voting for primary opponent Zephyr Teachout. But in this blue state, Cuomo's still running strong against Republican Rob Astorino.
- ☑ HOUSE, NY-1: Republican Lee Zeldin will be the House's only Jewish Republican (following the defeat of Eric Cantor) if he wins this rematch of his 2008 contest against Democratic Rep. Tim Bishop.
- ☑ HOUSE, NY-11: A 20-count federal indictment against incumbent Rep. Michael Grimm hasn't made this a slam dunk for his Democratic opponent, Domenic Recchia. Many voters in this mostly Staten Island district like Grimm's unapologetic style. Plus, Recchia is from rival borough Brooklyn.
- ☑ HOUSE, NY-19: Venture capitalist Sean Eldridge, the husband of Facebook co-founder Chris Hughes, moved to this Catskills-area district to challenge Republican Rep. Chris Gibson, an Iraq war veteran. Eldridge will have plenty of cash to compete in this pricey area, but he'll have to fight perceptions that he's an overly ambitious rich outsider.
- ☑ HOUSE NY-21: Republican Elise Stefanik would be the youngest woman ever elected to Congress if she wins in November. She's favored over documentary filmmaker Aaron Woolf in this open seat race.
- ☑ HOUSE, NY-23: Republican Rep. Tom Reed managed a narrow win again in 2012, and Democrats would love to take him down for good in 2014 – especially after the Buffalo News reported last year that he'd been late on his property taxes 38 times in 8 years. Tompkins County Legislator Martha Robertson is Democrats' pick to challenge him.

NORTH DAKOTA No major races to watch.

SOUTH DAKOTA

- ☑ SENATE: Independent candidate and former senator Larry Pressler is mixing up this race, which had been looking like a sure thing for Republicans. He's performing well in the competition with Democrat Rick Weiland and former GOP governor Mike Rounds. Rounds is still a favorite, but it's become an unpredictable contest.

TEXAS

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Despite national name recognition, Democrat Wendy Davis – famous for her filibuster of Texas abortion restrictions – hasn't run the kind of campaign she needed to turn this demographically-changing state blue quite yet. Former Attorney General Greg Abbott, who's been confined to a wheelchair since a tree fell on him at age 26, is favored to take the job from retiring Gov. Rick Perry.
- ☑ LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR: Republican Dan Patrick, a Houston radio show host, knocked off incumbent David Dewhurst in a hard-fought primary. Democrat Leticia Van de Putte, a state senator, is trying to knock the conservative firebrand off balance in the waning days of the election.
- ☑ HOUSE, TX-23: Immigration is a huge issue in this southern Texas district, where seven in 10 residents are Hispanic, and where voters narrowly picked Mitt Romney over Barack Obama in 2012. Freshman Democrat Pete Gallego, who is Hispanic, is in a fairly competitive race with former CIA officer Will Hurd.

WISCONSIN

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Republican Gov. Scott Walker is facing his third election in just four years after he survived a recall in 2012. He's been talked about as a potential 2016 candidate, but first he'll have to fend off a surprisingly resilient challenge from Mary Burke, whose father founded the Trek Bicycle company.

FINAL POLLS CLOSE at 10:00 PM ET (IOWA, MONTANA, NEVADA, UTAH)

IOWA

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Gov. Terry Branstad is expected to cruise to re-election. He's popular in the state, and his name at the top of the ticket could be a boon for other Republicans on the ballot. Democrats had trouble recruiting a challenger to Branstad, ending up with state Sen. Jack Hatch.
- ☑ SENATE: The Senate race between Republican Joni Ernst and Democrat Bruce Braley is one of the nation's hottest contests. Not only is it a key race for determining Senate control, there are also high stakes for Iowa and 2016. If she wins, Ernst would be the first woman elected to Congress from Iowa. And the winner will instantly become a must-see endorsement for 2016 presidential candidates.
- ☑ HOUSE, IA-3: Former Chuck Grassley staffer David Young won the GOP nomination after a contentious convention in June. One of the Republicans he beat out, Brad Zaun, threatened an independent bid but eventually backed down. This race is a toss-up between Young and Democrat Staci Appel.

MONTANA

- ☑ SENATE: Max Baucus' decision to retire may have cost Democrats their Senate control. After top recruit former Gov. Brian Schweitzer declined to run, they settled on Lt. Gov. John Walsh. Walsh was forced to end his campaign in August due to a plagiarism scandal. The Democratic candidate is now state Rep. Amanda Curtis, who'll face overwhelming front-runner GOP Rep. Steve Daines.

NEVADA

- ☑ LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR: This downballot race is worth mentioning, and not just because of the stakes for the governorship of the state. Republicans would like to see the current governor, Brian Sandoval, challenge Harry Reid in 2016 if he can leave the job in the hands of a GOP lieutenant. Their candidate is state Sen. Mark Hutchinson. But the Democrat in the race may be the most compelling part of the story; Assemblywoman Lucy Flores is a former gang member who grew up stealing cars in Las Vegas.

UTAH

- ☑ HOUSE: UT-4: Mia Love is poised to become the first Republican black woman elected to Congress if she wins this race, her second attempt at the seat. She narrowly lost to Democrat Jim Matheson in 2012, but he's retiring. The Mormon mom of three is now facing attorney Doug Owens, and she's the big favorite in this heavily conservative district.

(CALIFORNIA, HAWAII, IDAHO, OREGON, WASHINGTON)

CALIFORNIA

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Democrat Jerry Brown is already the longest-serving governor in the state's history. The man once ridiculed as "Governor Moonbeam" is a much more pragmatic pol than his 1970s nickname might suggest – and he's on a glide path to his fourth term. He's expected to easily beat Republican and former Bush Treasury official Neel Kashkari.
- ☑ HOUSE, CA-7: Freshman Ami Bera is a top target for Republicans, who think they have a strong challenger in former Rep. Doug Ose. But Bera, a doctor and the only Indian American currently serving in Congress, has a deep donor network.
- ☑ HOUSE, CA-21: – Incumbent Rep. David Valadao is one of just five Republicans in a seat won by Obama in 2012 by more than 52 percent of the vote, making him a prime Democratic target. In this heavily Hispanic district, disapproval of congressional Republicans – especially on immigration – could help push challenger Amanda Renteria to victory, even though Valadao has tried to distance himself from his party on the issue by vocally supporting comprehensive immigration reform.
- ☑ HOUSE, CA-26: Republicans list challenger Jeff Gorrell as one of their top challengers this cycle as they hope to knock out freshman Democratic Rep. Julia Brownley. Gorrell is a decorated Afghanistan war veteran as well as a former criminal prosecutor and budget vice chairman in the state assembly.
- ☑ HOUSE, CA-31: Democrat Pete Aguilar scraped into this general election contest, barely clinging to second place in the state's jungle primary in June. In the wake of the retirement of GOP Rep. Gary Miller, Aguilar looks like a favorite against GOP businessman Paul Chabot.
- ☑ HOUSE, CA-52: Candidate Carl DeMaio was raised by Jesuits after his young mother's death and is one of a handful of openly gay GOP candidates. He's running against Democratic incumbent Scott Peters, one of the House's top self-funders. DeMaio has been accused of sexual harassment by a former staffer, an allegation he vigorously denies.

- ☑ GOVERNOR: Incumbent Neil Abercrombie lost his primary against state Sen. David Ige, who's now trying to keep the governorship in Democratic hands in the race against former Lt. Gov. Duke Aiona. This is a complex race though; Honolulu Mayor Mufi Hannemann is also in the mix, running as an independent.
- ☑ HOUSE, HI-1: Democrat and state lawmaker Mark Takai is facing Republican former Rep. Charles Djou in this close race. Djou could be helped by strong performance by fellow Republican Duke Aiona in the governor's race.

IDAHO No major races to watch.

OREGON

- ☑ SENATE: Incumbent Democrat Jeff Merkley could have been in trouble this cycle, but the Republican candidate in this race – pediatric neurosurgeon Monica Wehby -- has struggled despite moderate positions that made her relatively palatable on paper for voters in this blue state. She's had to face reports of past "stalking" incidents involving a former boyfriend and ex-husband, and she's also had to deal with a web site plagiarism dust-up.

Walker is now facing the Republican Parnell in a two-man race, with Mallot running for lieutenant governor instead.
- ☑ SENATE: Incumbent Democrat Mark Begich and Republican Dan Sullivan have pulled no punches in this tight contest. Begich has worked to distance himself from Obama – including a vote against the president's plan to arm the Syrian rebels.
